Weathers Announces Specialty Crops Grants Program

Hugh E. Weathers, South Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture, announces the Specialty Crops Grant Program for institutions and groups that support specialty crops. Specialty crops are defined as fruits and vegetables, dried fruit, tree nuts, horticulture, and nursery crops (including floriculture). This program is funded by the U.S.D.A. Agricultural Marketing Service as established by the 2008 Farm Bill.

Those interested in participating in the Specialty Crops Grant Program are encouraged to provide a two-page summary that includes a project plan for use of the funds and the estimated cost of implementing the plan. The project must fall within the criteria listed below and must benefit groups of producers and not individuals. Those selected from the first round of applications will be asked to submit a full proposal as part of the overall state plan for use of the specialty crops grant funds.

Projects should be developed to solely enhance the competitiveness of specialty crops pertaining to the following issues affecting the specialty crop industry: increasing child and adult nutrition knowledge and consumption of specialty crops; improving efficiency and reducing cost of distribution systems; assisting all entities in the specialty crop distribution chain in developing "Good Agricultural Practices", "Good Handling Practices", "Good Manufacturing Practices", and in cost-share arrangements for funding audits of such systems for small farmers, packers and processors; investing in specialty crop research, including research to focus on conservation and environmental outcomes; enhancing food safety; developing new and improved seed varieties and specialty crops; pest and disease control; development of organic and sustainable production practices; developing local and regional food systems, and improving food access in underserved communities.

Fruit & Vegetable Association Hosts Food Safety Workshop

The South Carolina Fruit, Vegetable and Specialty Crop Association in cooperation with Clemson Extension Service, the SC Farm Bureau, and the SC Department of Agriculture will host a Food Safety Workshop for produce farmers, marketers and processors from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, April 28.

Due to the interest in the workshop, the location has been moved to a larger venue at the newly renovated South Carolina Farm Bureau auditorium, 724 Knox Abbott Drive, Cayce, SC.

The workshop is specifically designed to help fruit and vegetable producers understand what a food safety program covers, how to implement one on a farm or in a packing facility and how to prepare for a food safety audit. Proposed federal regulations may require all growers, marketers, and processors to implement written food safety plans for their operations for proper food handling practices.

The day-long workshop will provide information to growers, marketers, and processors in the processes and procedures regarding Good Agricultural Practices (G.A.P.), Good Manufacturing Practices (G.M.P.), 3rd party audits, and other food safety standards of operation. Certification in these areas is especially important to those who wish to participate in certain state and federal programs and may be required by produce customers and brokers.

What Grows well in SC? - Farmers Markets

A century ago, you probably wouldn't have spent your Saturday morning at the local farmers market because more than likely, your farm was your farmers market. Even a decade ago only a handful of community-based farmers markets existed in South Carolina. Today, there are nearly 95 farmers markets in the state and more in the development stage. We'll let you know when we hit 100!

The increase in the number of community-based farmers markets is directly proportionate with the increase in demand for locally grown food. A majority of consumers today want to eat healthier. They are more environmentally-savvy and economically-minded. At the same time, they like the idea of visiting with local farmers and others within their communities. The community-based farmers market has become as much a social gathering place as it is a place to buy fresh, local produce. Blanche summed it up pretty good a while back by saying that food is sexy again.

While the demand for local has increased, consumers still want to shop nearby. We want healthy but we want convenience. In order to accommodate them, farmers markets continue to spring up particularly in urban settings throughout the state. Successful farmers markets in the city translate to successful rural communities where farmers live and work.

More and more farmers are returning to or expanding to farmers markets as a way to meet their customers desire for local. To assist them in marketing activities to food safety initiatives, the Department offers a combination of tools that are used to satisfy customers and turn a profit for farmers while building the economy in the communities in which they live and work.

Many of the Department's activities are related to commerce - buying and selling agricultural products. Consumers want a quality product at a reasonable price located in a convenient place. Farmers markets strategically located help fill the 'convenient place' part of the marketing mix. But, in order to help consumers know where to buy and what is available, farmers also need to promote their product.

On the product side of the marketing mix, the Department provides activities to help farmers provide a consistent supply of quality product. We offer food safety workshops for farmers to help them with regulatory compliance regarding the sale of produce and products.

At the farm level, the Department offers third party audits to help the produce industry minimize the risk of contamination based on FDA guidelines. In addition, our consumer services inspectors collect official produce samples randomly drawn from farmers markets statewide as part of a "market basket survey." The Chemical Residue Laboratory analyzes the samples to ensure that the produce meets the state's Food Safety Laws. Year after year, our growers are shown to be doing a good job in providing fresh, nutritious produce that is safe to eat.

Rounding out the marketing mix equation is promotion. The Department has several programs and services assisting farmers in the promotion of their products.

The Certified SC branding and marketing program was launched three years ago to help consumers in their quest to find and buy South Carolina produce and products. Our goal was to promote agricultural commerce particularly in rural communities. We now have nearly 800 members in this program who are cooperatively marketing and promoting their products. In addition, we have over 270 members in our Fresh on the Menu program. Chefs agree to put at least 25% of Certified SC Grown foods and products on the menu in season. The folks in these efforts are telling us that the program is working for them, and consumers are telling us they are better able to find produce and products in season whether in the farmers market or in the restaurant.

Other programs like the Farmers Market Nutrition Programs (FMNP) have provided additional markets for farmers by helping seniors and WIC consumers with access to locally grown. Qualified participants are allowed to use their FMNP checks to buy fresh local produce at participating farmers markets and some roadside stands. The Department with partners, DHEC and DSS, has trained over 500 farmers in South Carolina to sell in this program serving more than 40,000 nutritionally at-risk families in the state. The Department is responsible for authorizing farmers to participate in these programs.

The Department also authorizes and trains farmers market managers in how to accept EBT cards at their markets. Families with limited financial resources in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) program now have access to fresh locally grown fruits and vegetables through this program. We now have 40 roadside and community markets set up to accept EBT cards. This gives local farmers more access to SNAP dollars which are now provided through the use of EBT cards.

The demand for local continues to grow farmers markets statewide. The opportunities for selling direct to consumers are obvious - farmers get 100 percent of the revenue stream and consumers get 100 percent fresh! The spin off of farmers markets is that communities grow and prosper, too.

Visit www.agriculture.sc.gov, click on Publications, and scroll to Farmers Market Directory for a list of community-based farmers markets in your area. If you have a favorite farmers market, let us know where it is and why you like it. We'll pass it on to other readers.

Carne Para Asar Mexican Beef Marinade

Total Recipe Time:
30 to 40 minutes
Marinade Time:
6 hours to overnight

2 pounds beef flank or skirt steak
chopped fresh cilantro (optional)

Marinade:
1/3 cup fresh lime juice
1/3 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon white vinegar
1-1/2 teaspoons dried
marjoram leaves
1-1/2 teaspoons dried
Mexican oregano leaves
1-1/2 teaspoons garlic powder
or 2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Combine Marinade ingredients in large nonreactive bowl. Place beef steak and marinade in food-safe plastic bag; turn steak to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 hours or as long as overnight, turning occasionally.

Remove steak from marinade; discard marinade. To grill flank steak, place steak on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill, uncovered, 17 to 21 minutes; 10 to 13 minutes for skirt steak (over medium heat on preheated gas grill, covered, 16 to 21 minutes; 8 to 12 minutes for skirt steak) for medium rare (145°F) to medium (160°F) doneness, turning occasionally. Carve steak across the grain into thin slices. Garnish with cilantro, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

South Carolina Ag teacher wins national award and truck

A South Carolina FFA teacher has been awarded a 2010 Toyota Tundra truck after being honored with the Outstanding Postsecondary/Adult Program Award from the National Association of Agricultural Educators (NAAE).

Jeremy Brooks of Midland High School and Midland Valley Young Farmers program was awarded the truck on a two-year lease for his work with the Midland Valley Young Farmers program at a presentation during the South Carolina FFA State Legislature Day in February at the state fairgrounds in Columbia.

Jeremy Brooks, an agricultural education teacher at Midland Valley High School, is presented with the keys to a 2010 Toyota Tundra truck after being honored as with the Outstanding Postsecondary/Adult Program Award from the National Association of Agricultural Educators.

Brooks has taught at Midland High School since 2002 and believes students learn best from each other, using hands on activities to enhance what is being taught on the chalkboard. Since the closing of the local textile mill, the community has changed economically and the Young Farmers chapter has adjusted to fit its needs. There is a lot of emphasis on environmental and natural resource programming in Graniteville, so Brooks offers high school courses in wildlife management and outdoor recreation in the evening to adult students. The enrollment in these courses, along with hunter and boater education, archery and herpetology, is around 10 students annually.

The Midland Valley Young Farmers are responsible for securing guest speakers that they want to hear and share with FFA members. They strive to make their meetings both informational and entertaining by participating in activities like pumpkin carving and trail riding. They give back to the community by providing educational materials at area events, sending care packages to a local injured soldier, selling poinsettias during the holiday season to raise funds for a scholarship.

"The program is definitely a leader in the community," said Allen Williams, South Carolina Association of Agricultural Educators president. "In addition to its excellent scholastic accomplishments, the program has proven its outstanding ability by hosting many community activities for the local high school and its FFA members."

The National Association of Agricultural Educators (NAAE) selects one postsecondary agricultural program from each of its six regions across the United States to be named the areas top program. Jeremy Brooks represents Region V, which includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Six teachers selected by NAAE as the country's top educators throughout middle school to postsecondary institutions, as well as a department representative from each of the six postsecondary programs will receive a Toyota Tundra Double Cab 5.7L V8 4X4 on a two-year lease. NAAE annually selects the 12 honorees through an application process.
